GRAMMATICAL

1.  New System of English Examples to Latin Syntax: or, An easy method of initiating children in the latin tongue, (1) by Grammar Rudiments, in a few, clear, comprehensive precepts, (2) with Variety of Examples, in a natural gradation of sentences from the more simple and easy, to the more complex and difficult. (3) to which is added an accurate account of the doctrine of Mood and Tense, in a large collection of select sentences from the classic writers. The whole design'd for an Introduction and Supplement to the English Examples that are already extant. 1 s.

2. A System of Elegant Grammar: with a Supplement to Mr. Lowe's Rudiments of Latin Grammar, prefix'd to his new System of English Examples. 6 d.

3. Grammars of the French and Greek tongues, offer'd to schools for use, and to the learned for examination, as much Shorter, Plainer, and Fuller than those that are commonly taught; and better Contriv'd for the Ease of Teachers, and the rational and expeditious Improvement of Learners, whether young or old, than any yet extant.

tant. ——— To these is prefix'd An Appendix to Grammar, containing (i) Directions for Composing, Construing, Parsing, Writing elegantly, and gaining a Copia of thoughts and words. (ii) A System of RHETORIC, which contains (1) A Table of the Ages of the Latin tongue, with an account of the Authors that flourish'd in each. (2) The Doctrin of Purity, Perspicuity, Elegant placing of words, Dignity of Expression, and Gracefulness of Pronunciation. (3) The Tropes and Figures in English Verse, with Scripture-Examples. (4) An Account of the nature of Pleadings, and conduct of Orations: (5) with the Topics of Invention, both Logical and Rhetorical. (6) The Whole illustrated with Notes from the most celebrated of the Ancient and Modern Rhetoricians. (iii) A System of PROSODY, which contains (i) about Syllables (1) The usual Rules of Quantity more comprehensive and correct in 107 verses, pictur'd to the imagination in 4 pages; and render'd more intelligible, and easy either to consult or to remember, by numbers prefix'd to the several exceptions under each rule. (2) A List of words Alike in Sound, but Different in Quantity in 31 verses. (3) An Account, in two opposit pages, of all those words, for the quantity of which, in other Prosodies, we are refer'd to the Poets, to Smetius, or Gradus ad Parnassum. (ii) about Verses (1) A copious and accurat account of their Denominations, Dimension, and Affections. (2) A Table of the several Sorts us'd by the ancients; presenting at one view, with more evidence and exactness than elsewhere, their several Names and Denominations, together with the Number of their feet, and the method of Scanning them. (3) Difficiles Nugae: or An account of Acrostics, Anagrams, and such Quaint Devices, down from Simmius's Egg, to John Peter's Artificial Versifying; whereby any one of ordinary capacity, though he understands not one word of latin, may be taught immediately to make 590490 Hexameter and Pentameter verses, true latin, true verse, and good sense. 2 s. 6 d.

4. A complete Table of Greek Characters, curiously Engrav'd: many of which are not to be found in all the Grammars put together: though, without them, it is impossible to read the authors that have been publisht by the most celebrated Printers. Proper to be put in a frame; or pasted into Dr Busby's, or Mr Lowe's Greek Grammar. 6 d.

A New Method of Learning Latin, with extraordinary ease and expedition ; and without any perplexity or embarasment to those that have been, or that may be oblig'd either to teach, or learn any other method : consisting of the following Parts :

5. Vocabulary : Latin and English : containing (1) The Primitives, alphabetically distributed in each page into three separate apartments, of the most Usual, Rarer, and Rarest words : and, in the same order, (2) The Derivatives, whose signification or primitives are not obvious : to which is added an account of their original. (3) A Specimen of the Nature of Derivation, with the Chief Kinds of Derivatives. (4) Barbarisms Latiniz'd : or the latter part of Dr Ker's Norma Loquendi, fitted for the use of schools : being A List of such words as are common among the moderns ; though the old romans either us'd them not at all, or us'd them in a different sense. to which are added Synonyms of sufficient authority, together with their interpretation. (5) Tables of Corresponding Terminations and Similar Sounds in English and Latin : by which children will be enabled to interpret abundance of latin words ; and led into a notion of deriving english ones by the harmony of sense and sound from those of other languages. (6) A Specimen of Latin Anglicisms : or A List of such words, as are likeliest to be suspected on the account of their affinity to the english, and consequently disus'd ; especially since many of them want authorities in our dictionaries, or have actually been condemn'd by some or other of the critics that are in high reputation. (7) Grammar Lists : or Catalogues of Certain Words with Certain Accidents : containing directions how to know the Declension of a word by the Nominative case, and the Conjugation of a verb by the Indicative present ; together with an account of the Genitive of the Third declension, and other useful instructions, which are fittest to be learnt by way of vocabulary ; and which, if dispos'd in the body of the grammar, would diminish its beauty and usefulness, by reason of their disproportion. (8) Common Places : containing an accurate account of the Roman Numbers, Weights, Mony, Measures, &c.

6. Sententiae Puériles : Latin and English : containing (1) The Fundamental Rules of Syntax illustrated by Latin Examples and English Exercises, in a natural gradation of sentences from the more simple and easy to the more complex and difficult. (2) Familiar miliar Phrases and Idioms : or A Collection of such Expressions as do most naturally occur, on ordinary occasions, especially in the conversation of children. (3) Moral Reflections : or a select Number of Proverbs and Apophthegms : containing the philosophy of the english populace in the phrase of the roman classics: with which are intermixt Scripture Sayings in Heathen Language, or A Specimen of that harmony, which may often be observ'd between the dictates of reason in the wiser gentiles, and the doctrines of revelation in the inspir'd writers. (4) Walker's Particles methodiz'd and improv'd : or, A Treatise (in verse) of those English Particles in the application of which children are most puzzled, and soonest mistaken ; especially on account of their being made signs of certain accidents in the rudiments of grammar.

7. Latin Grammar : offer'd to schools for use, and to the learned for examination ; as the Shortest, Plainest, Fullest, and Best-contriv'd, as well for the ease of teachers, as for the rational and expeditious improvement of learners, of whatever age, capacities, or attainments.

8. A Dictionary of Idioms, and various other curious particulars relating to grammar : in drawing up of which the same qualifications have been aim'd at as in compiling the grammar.

HISTORICAL

9. The Protestant Family-piece : or, A Picture of Popery ; drawn from their own principles, express'd in the very words of their Popes, Councils, Canons, and Celebrated writers, faithfully collected and translated : by which it appears that Roman Catholics are bound to be the Worst Subjects, and the Worst Neighbours. 2 s. 6 d.

POETICAL

10. The Bee : Select Poëms, from Books and Manuscripts in III Parts. 6 d. each.
